Greetings!

We have been hearing a lot recently about the role of parents in preventing violence. SCY believes that positive parenting can contribute to youth success and promotes efforts to support parents through our advocacy and knowledge sharing. To learn more about how you can support positive parenting, come to our training next Tuesday, July 12.

Sincerely,

Survey: Call for Programs Addressing Trauma

Adverse Childhood Experiences Environment Scan

The Illinois ACE Response Collaborative is creating an inventory (also called an Environmental Scan) of programs addressing trauma, Adverse Childhood Experiences (ACEs), and/or building resiliency. Your help is needed to identify programs, particularly in Illinois.

Please complete the online survey (about 10 minutes) with the information you have about your program and other programs you know of, even if it's just the name of a program. The Illinois ACE Response Collaboration will follow up with programs to ensure accuracy of data and collect additional information.

Health in the American Workplace

Are We Doing Enough?

For good or for bad, jobs impact employees' health. From stress levels, to eating habits, to worries about workplace violence and toxic exposures, people confront a variety of challenges on the job. This webcast will draw on the findings of a soon-to-be released poll about the workplace and health by NPR, the Robert Wood Johnson Foundation, and Harvard T.H. Chan School of Public Health. A panel of experts in workplace culture and public opinion will take on the concerns most expressed by employees - as well as describe lessons learned from employers that cultivate healthy environments - to see if there are feasible measures to produce a more accessible, supportive, healthier workplace.

Back to Basics Webinar

Primary and Behavioral Health Care Integration

Integration is a hot topic and buzz word in health care. And, integrated primary and behavioral health care is the best approach to care for people with complex health care needs. But, do you have an elevator speech when someone asks you about integrated care? What do you tell new staff during orientation and how do you communicate the value to potential partners? Join this webinar to go back to the basics of primary and behavioral health care integration and learn how to effectively communicate the importance of integrated care.
